- 1. Do you have anything to add to (or expand on) in regard to the tips that were listed in the first article?
- 2. Do you think you get more or less trolling than the average chat host? Why?
- 3. Do you have any advice for a NEW cam chat host in terms of dealing with abusive comments and trolling in general?
- 4. Do negative comments or rude cam clients still get to you/upset you? How do you deal with it, if it does? Do you have an outlet to let off steam?
- 5. Do you have any ideas/suggestions about what we can do as a community to reduce the amount of trolling/bullying that's present on cam sites?

1. (no ans.)

2. I think I get an average amount. Because of the volume of people coming in and out of my room, trolls are bound to happen. I'm a dirty talking, nasty camgirl though so I think it's different for me.

3. It's all about finding your own way to deal with people in your chat room who are rude or mean. I make it clear in my room, for instance, that I will tolerate people saying anything to me or about me in free chat (if I don't cry or get upset and either laugh or talk dirty back to a troller, they either get bored and leave or buy one of my shows) but no one is allowed to criticize or judge another person's fantasy in my chat. I secretly like when a new person comes into my room, calls me a whore and I either fire right back and say, "Good morning, asshole" or "Mmmmm.... god daddy, I love when you call me a whore" and more times than not, I have a new paying fan. I think I'm lucky when it comes to trolls because I already am a dirty talking, filthy cum whore who loves to beg for it, so it's just natural for me.

If someone is making nasty comments about you, I like to remind them that this is the internet, there is something out there for everyone. If I'm not it, then I wish them all the best in finding whoever is.

4. I laugh it off. If you're a cam performer, there's a certain amount of self esteem and self respect that will help you go a long way. You can't change trolls, but you can change how you look at them and deal with them. Block them, log off to regroup, remember that you are the one with the power. If they cross a line, document what they said and report them to your customer service. You are the commodity. You are the star. They're just an asshole.

5. Don't I wish....
